The mission of the Virginia Tech Foundation is to support the programs of Virginia Tech. The foundation does this by generating funding from private sources and aggressively managing its assets to supplement state appropriations, tuition, and other sources of funds. The foundation provides financial assistance to students, additional operating support to colleges and departments, assists in the funding of major building projects, provides seed capital for new university initiatives, and initiates major projects as requested by the university.

The foundation manages Virginia Tech's endowment, through which donors to the university make a significant and ongoing difference to the faculty and students. This year, Virginia Tech donors created 120 endowments, including ones for undergraduate scholarships, graduate student fellowships, faculty support, athletic scholarships, the Center for the Arts, and other initiatives.

The foundation is also a responsible corporate citizen. As such, the foundation deploys capital in ways that serve the interests not only of the university, but also of the region and wider community.

The Virginia Tech Foundation saw strong and encouraging growth in a variety of areas this year, including record growth in revenues and the value of its assets. This year we spent more than ever before on student financial assistance and the value of the endowment per student grew by 18 percent to $19,619. The foundation also expended nearly $52 million on program support to the university.

More encouraging than the strong growth we saw this year is the continuing strong growth over the long term. In the past five years, the value of the Virginia Tech endowment has grown by more than 22 percent. That kind of consistent growth enables us to support a widening variety of strategic initiatives and ensures that we’ll be able to do that, not just now, but also in the future.

This year, the foundation provided a building for a new research center in Arlington, enabling faculty to engage in leading-edge research and build partnerships with federal agencies and corporations. The new clubhouse at the Pete Dye River Course also opened, enhancing the reputation of this nationally recognized golf course. Furthermore Phase II of the award-winning Virginia Tech Corporate Research Center (CRC) was begun during the year. This expansion means that the CRC will offer additional opportunities for Virginia Tech faculty and others to bring their research to market and provide opportunities for Virginia Tech students to apply knowledge they’ve learned in the classroom.

We should all be very proud to be associated with an organization like the Virginia Tech Foundation. I know that the work we are doing together is helping Virginia Tech accomplish amazing things in the classrooms, laboratories, and across the nation and world.

In addition to benefitting the university, the projects supported by the foundation also stimulate economic development in communities across the commonwealth and world in ways that keep contemporary the university’s land-grant heritage. You make it possible for the foundation to further the mission of Virginia Tech, which in turn makes lives better for people around the globe.

Thank you for your continuing support of the foundation, which makes possible the excellent work it does.

By nearly all measures, fiscal year 2011 was a banner year for the Virginia Tech Foundation as we met and exceeded several important benchmarks. The value of the foundation’s assets hit a record, totaling nearly $1.16 billion. Because of record giving from donors and strong investment management, the value of the university endowment crossed the $600 million threshold. Expenditures on student financial assistance grew to nearly $21.6 million in 2011.

Such strong growth bodes well, both for the future and for our present, and we were able to support several major university initiatives this fiscal year. In June, we opened the doors of the Virginia Tech Research Center – Arlington, the newest addition to Virginia Tech’s National Capital Region facilities. The center will allow Virginia Tech to partner with some of the nation’s top research organizations and federal agencies, creating new knowledge, enhancing Virginia Tech’s reputation and bringing alternative sources of revenue to the university.

We also assisted in establishing the National Tire Research Center (NTRC), an advanced tire research and test facility in Southside Virginia. The facility is a partnership between the Virginia Tech Transportation Institute, General Motors, the Department of Mechanical Engineering in Virginia Tech’s College of Engineering, the Institute for Advanced Learning and Research, the Southside Virginia community, and the Virginia Tobacco Indemnification and Community Relations Revitalization Commission. This center will build relationships and enhance economic development in an area of the commonwealth that is reinventing itself. This center will be an important contributor to that process.

Fostering its mission of serving the community, the foundation received a grant from the U.S. Department of Commerce Broadband Technologies Opportunities Program to extend Virginia’s open-access fiber optic backbone into the central Appalachian region of the state, providing Internet service to underserved communities in Southwest Virginia.

Furthermore, the staff at the foundation is committed to serving the community. VTF staff members give to and volunteer for a variety of local charities including the United Way of Montgomery, Radford, and Floyd; the American Heart Association; the Montgomery County Humane Society; and the Montgomery County Christmas Store. Their efforts, on behalf of the community, extend the good work of the foundation.

Thank you for your significant support during the past year. This has permitted the Virginia Tech Foundation to expand its role in advancing Virginia Tech in new and dramatic ways that benefit the university community, the Commonwealth of Virginia, and the world.
While much of the foundation's work directly supports the teaching, research, or outreach missions of the university, some of the most interesting things we do touch all three and contribute to the economic development of the region.

TURNER STREET DEVELOPMENT

Through a development and purchase agreement with a local developer, the Virginia Tech Foundation acquired approximately 3.93 acres along Turner, Gilbert, and Barger streets, across the street from the university's main campus. The property has been divided into three parcels. Two of the parcels are being developed into a 141,000-gross-square-foot mixed-use office/retail building along with an approximately 800-space parking garage. On Oct. 15, 2010, the Executive Committee approved up to $52 million of debt financing for the project.

The office portion of the mixed-use building will provide space for Virginia Tech's Controller's Office, Human Resources, Internal Audit, Purchasing, Capital Assets and Financial Development, Diversity and Inclusion, and Sponsored Programs. The parking garage will provide parking for the building tenants, university employees on the main campus, and visitors to the new Center for the Arts. The first floor will be leased for retail/restaurant purposes in accordance with local zoning requirements.

In May 2011, the foundation awarded a contract to Holder Construction Group for Phase I, the public improvements package of the project. Construction of Phase I started in June 2011. Occupancy of the building is scheduled for June 2013, concurrent with the opening of the Center for the Arts.

The Turner Street Development allows the foundation to improve and strategically control the development of property adjacent to the northeast zone of the university campus, assist the university in meeting its office space needs, support the Center for the Arts, and generate revenue from non-university tenants, which is reinvested solely for the benefit of the university.

COLLEGIATE SQUARE

In fall 2009, the Virginia Tech Foundation purchased the Collegiate Square Shopping Center located near the heart of downtown Blacksburg at the corner of Prices Fork Road and Turner Street. This property is located across the street from the main university campus and directly adjacent to the new Turner Street Development under construction.

Collegiate Square Shopping Center has 79,148 square feet of rentable tenant space. The university occupies all of the office space in the center with the remaining retail space being leased to a local developer.

The Collegiate Square Shopping Center is presently meeting all of its debt obligations, putting aside sufficient maintenance reserves, and providing positive cash flow to the foundation.

The acquisition of the Collegiate Square Shopping Center helps diversify the foundation’s real estate portfolio while providing needed office space to the university and retail space to the surrounding community. It also helps with the development of the Turner Street Development due to its proximity as well as providing connectivity between the two properties.
REAL ESTATE DONATIONS: DONATE A COMMON ASSET WITH UNCOMMON ADVANTAGES

Over the years, generous donors have contributed real estate to the Virginia Tech Foundation to help support the university and its mission. Gifts of real estate are a wonderful way to take an existing, appreciated asset and create a lasting legacy. Homes, farms, vacation houses and condos, apartment complexes, residential lots, and raw land are the most common types of donated real estate. The foundation has also received property with life estates, allowing donors to continue to use and enjoy the property during their lifetime, while at the same time ensuring the property is ultimately transferred to the foundation for the purpose intended. Although some properties are held for use by the university, most are made available for sale or lease to the general public. The sale or lease of the donated property helps fund such things as the donor’s capital improvement pledge or even support a scholarship award. The Real Estate Office at the Virginia Tech Foundation is responsible for handling the donations, managing the properties, and selling or leasing these assets for the highest price in order to fund the donor’s intended area of support.

LOVE FOR ANIMALS INSPIRES GIFT OF REAL ESTATE

Bill and Rita Thornton recently made a gift of real estate to the Virginia Tech Foundation. They donated 164 acres of hunting land near Blacksburg to the college. Their intent was to advance research within the Virginia Maryland Regional College of Veterinary Medicine. And that is exactly what will happen. Significant proceeds were generated by the sale of the property. The Thorntons directed that those funds be applied toward construction of a new research facility known as the Translational Medicine Complex.

“We just thought it was a very good cause,” Thornton said.

The term “translational medicine” refers to an effort within the medical field to bring together basic researchers and clinicians. It is widely believed that doing this will improve the process by which new drugs reach the clinical-trial stage.

The Thorntons have been impressed by the research being conducted at the college. “I guess the biggest thing I learned was just about the research – it’s absolutely fantastic,” Rita said. “It’s absolutely amazing to see how much they can do over there, and how eventually the research will also relate to human beings.”

Thanks to their gift of real estate, important discoveries in animal medicine are certain to keep coming at Virginia Tech, though they may soon be taking place in a different, brand new building.
SUPPORTING STUDENTS WITH SCHOLARSHIPS

Scholarships might be the most important way that the Virginia Tech Foundation supports students and academics at the university. The Harry Bramhall Gilbert Scholarship, which was established this year, is one example of what scholarships make possible at Virginia Tech.

Imagine returning to college for your senior year and learning you had been awarded a generous scholarship for which you had not even applied.

That is the happy situation dozens of Virginia Tech seniors could find themselves in each year from now on, thanks to an extraordinary scholarship endowed in fiscal year 2011 by the Harry Bramhall Gilbert Charitable Trust of Chesapeake, Va.

With its largest ever donation – $1.29 million – the trust endowed a fund at the Virginia Tech Foundation to support alumni of the Chesapeake Public Schools who have established strong track records of academic success.

Starting in the 2011-12 school year, those students will automatically qualify for one-time, one-year scholarships if they have at least a 3.4 grade point average, after earning 90 or more credit hours at Virginia Tech, and meet several other criteria.

Based on patterns of enrollment and achievement at Virginia Tech by students from the Chesapeake Public School division over the past few years, the number of students qualifying for the scholarship was expected to be around 40. Stuart Glasser, a trustee of the Harry Bramhall Gilbert Charitable Trust, has said that no cap has been set on the number of students who can receive the scholarship in a given year, and all those who qualify will receive one, regardless of financial need.

The scholarship Glasser arranged will make a major difference for many students and their families, as will dozens of other new financial aid funds that were created over the fiscal year.

In all, 77 new scholarship accounts were created, $4 of which were endowed. Together, those 77 accounts received more than $3.6 million in gifts. And many more millions were given to existing scholarship funds. Including those types of funds, whether endowed or operating, the foundation received $21.8 million for scholarships.

SUPPORTING STUDENTS AROUND THE COMMONWEALTH:
WASHINGTON-ALEXANDRIA ARCHITECTURE CENTER | WWW.WAAC.VT.EDU

In addition to the new Virginia Tech Research Center – Arlington, the Virginia Tech Foundation also owns facilities on Prince Street in Alexandria, Va., which house the Washington-Alexandria Architecture Center (WAAC). According to Jaan Holt, the Patrick and Nancy Lathrop Professor of Architecture and director of the center, these facilities have become critical to the operation of the College of Architecture and Urban Studies.

The center runs the only academic Consortium of Architecture in the country. The international consortium now has 10 members. The oldest member has been with the consortium for 25 years. It has recently added Bahrain University (Bahrain), the University of Kent (England) and the University of Desarrollo (Chile).

According to Holt, such a consortium would be impossible to put together in Blacksburg.

This past year, the WAAC ran the international Professional Design Competition for the Pedestrian-Cyclist Bridge as part of the 4 Mile Run Urban Stream Reclamation Project. The bridge serves the City of Alexandria and the County of Arlington as an urban connection. The competition was won by Grimshaw and Partners out of England.

The WAAC is continuing to grow and hopes to add the urban design degree program next year.

“CAUS is grateful for the support of the foundation in all of these efforts. We realize that these endeavors in academics, outreach, and research would not be possible without its long-term commitment.” Jaan Holt

Fiscal year 2011 ended on a high note for Virginia Tech’s National Capital Region operations, with the official opening in late June of the Virginia Tech Research Center – Arlington.

The foundation-owned center, located at 900 North Glebe Road in the Ballston section of Arlington, Va., is seven stories high, contains 144,000 square feet of space, and is U.S. Green Council LEED Certified. It will serve as headquarters for the administrative offices of the university’s operations in the region. Four of the university’s research institutes and seven of its research centers also occupy space in the building, as do faculty from three Virginia Tech colleges.

The university faculty and organizations that use the building are certain to benefit from its location in Arlington’s Ballston neighborhood, which has the nation’s highest concentration of scientific research agencies.

The building includes executive conference space on the second floor, which can be booked for meetings. The building’s first floor will house a restaurant. Additional space on that floor is expected to be used for science and technology exhibits that will be open to the public.

Opening the building is a major step in longstanding efforts to extend Virginia Tech’s operations into one of the nation’s most important marketplaces. The Virginia Tech Foundation also played a significant role in earlier elements of this expansion by developing the Marion duPont Scott Equine Medical Center in Leesburg, Va. (pictured at left), and the Washington-Alexandria Architecture Center in Alexandria [see page 9 for more information on the Washington-Alexandria Architecture Center].
The Virginia Tech Corporate Research Center (CRC), a for-profit subsidiary of the Virginia Tech Foundation, continues to expand. Currently, more than 140 research and development businesses and research centers are located at the park. The total employment level of the park now exceeds 2,200 personnel. The park consists of 27 buildings containing more than 960,000 square feet. The CRC is planned for a total build-out of 1 million square feet on the current 120 acre phase. The design for the 28th building is in progress. The building has an expected completion date of June 2012 and companies are being recruited for occupancy.

Like the Virginia Tech Foundation, the CRC seeks to advance Virginia Tech’s teaching, research, and outreach missions. Various student groups work with companies at the park as part of their studies. CRC tenant companies sponsor research at the university each year. Faculty members consult with tenant companies as a means of remaining on the cutting edge of new technology. This new knowledge is then put to work in the classroom, where many students benefit.

VT Knowledgeworks holds an annual Global Partnership Week that provides student teams and faculty, from all over the world, experiences in collaboration and global networking through learning, socializing and friendly competition in the New River Valley. The main focus of the week is the VT Knowledgeworks Global Student Business Concept Challenge, with a grand prize of $25,000 being awarded to this year’s winning team, Team Kimeltu, from Pontifical University of Chile.

The success of the tenants in the park has been due in part to advantages offered by the CRC, including a comprehensive business assistance program, a low-cost telecommunications infrastructure, a financial assistance package, training opportunities, and personnel assistance. The quality of life in the park is also enriched by numerous recreational opportunities, such as volleyball and basketball leagues, hiking trails, bike and running events, an on-site 5,000 square-foot fitness center, and an amphitheater.

The biggest achievement during the past year is the design and development of Phase II of its campus. The groundbreaking for Phase II took place in September. This second phase will almost double the acreage of the park and provide a growth path for the CRC for many years to come. The master plan anticipates an additional 18 buildings in Phase II. The infrastructure for Phase II should be complete in late 2011.

The CRC was named the 2010 Outstanding Research/Science Park by the Association of University Research Parks, which consists of 175 national and international parks.

Fiscal year 2011 was a successful year for WVTF and RADIO IQ even though the station faced threats to funding on both the state and federal level. Although the recession put revenue sources under stress, individual donations reached an all-time high. Corporate underwriting struggled, but rebounded from fiscal year 2010 and nearly reached its goal of $700,000 by fiscal year end.

A federal grant from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB) jumped over 26 percent, primarily due to an expected fiscal year 2010 bonus grant of $34,000 being awarded in fiscal year 2011. Fortunately, the station did not have its CPB funding rescinded for fiscal year 2011, thus federal funding totals were excellent.

Support from the Virginia Tech Foundation remained even at $72,000 and represents an important endorsement of WVTF's community service as well as being a much needed revenue resource to help sustain the radio station's news, information, and cultural programming.

A $200,000 two-year grant, received from the Virginia Education Association (VEA), infused new life into the station's Virginia Public Radio (VPR) news bureau project. VPR is the Richmond-based news service for public radio stations in the state. The VEA funding precipitated increased feature and spot news reporting, the development of a statewide interview call-in program, "Assembly Conversations", and underwrote a new "Fact Checking" series with an investigative reporter from the Richmond Times Dispatch newspaper.

Expanding the station's signal to serve more listeners continued in fiscal year 2011 with the launch of a new Richmond frequency and the acquisition of a new signal north of Richmond along I-95. RADIO IQ is now heard on our low-power translator (92.5 FM) in the capital city.

The station formalized its listener support group known as the WVTF-RADIO IQ Friends Council. The primary mission of the council is to help the station gain support while offering insight and guidance to help it remain a valuable resource for our current and expanding audience. The commonwealth benefits from having citizens who are informed, inspired, and educated by stimulating, honest, and meaningful public radio programming.

In addition to the increased revenues, WVTF was awarded three regional Edward R. Murrow Awards for outstanding news and feature reporting. WVTF's award-winning news, information, and cultural program content is a springboard that launches critical thinking, inspires entrepreneurial endeavors, and invites new residents and businesses to invest their lives and livelihood in our communities.
There were signs of a slowly improving economy that helped The Hotel Roanoke & Conference Center deliver another solid performance during fiscal year 2011. With a balanced proportion of group and transient/leisure business, the hotel's occupancy reached 73.1 percent, compared to 71.8 percent in 2009-10. The average daily rate had a modest improvement to $130.31. Total hotel revenues were at $18,589,589, ahead of 2009-10. The total cash distributed for debt service and other obligations was more than $2.4 million, with $1.5 million coming directly to the foundation.

The center continues to be a valuable asset for Virginia Tech's outreach mission and enhances the university's image among travelers and conference attendees who stay at the facility each year. Virginia Tech's colleges, the Center for Organizational and Technological Advancement, and continuing education programs are consistently using the center for meetings and events. The growth in overall group room night volume this year was highlighted by a significant improvement (46.2 percent) in the university market segment. Total group rooms were at 37,196 for the year and the university segment generated 10,406 room nights or 28.0 percent of the total group production which represented 42.1 percent of total occupancy.

The hotel and conference center continues to focus on delivering exceptional products and services. Early in 2011, the property was awarded the prestigious Connie Award for 2010, the highest level of recognition within the DoubleTree by Hilton brand, for having the best guest satisfaction results of properties with 225 rooms or more. In addition, the facility was recognized with its seventh consecutive PRIDE Award (given to top 10 performing hotels, and received the Excellence in Food and Beverage award.

The past year also saw several property improvement projects including the renovation and re-positioning of the exterior garden courtyard. This space now provides a warm and welcoming outdoor arena that is perfect for wedding ceremonies, wedding receptions, and other social and corporate events. It also provides an intimate gathering place for hotel guests where they can gather around the fire pit and enjoy an early morning cup of coffee or an after dinner beverage. We continued to replace guest room windows with ones that open and are more energy efficient. In addition new artwork and nightlights were added to each guest room bath, along with lighted make-up mirrors. Enhancements were made to back-of-house facilities and infrastructure, including upgrades to kitchen equipment, housekeeping and carpet care equipment, and the replacement of a damaged hot water storage tank.

In January 2011, a new management contract went into effect with Hilton Worldwide extending the partnership until December 2015.

During the past year, The Pete Dye River Course was recognized as a championship-caliber golf course. Debuting at number 18 in Golfweek's 2010 list of Best Campus Courses, the course is not only one of the finest university golf venues, but also a unique setting for conferences, retreats, and special events. During fiscal year 2011, more than 50 golf events were held for members, university organizations, civic and charitable organizations, and organized leagues.

The highlight golf event of the year was the NCAA East Regional Championship played in mid-May. The tournament encouraged Virginia Tech to consider hosting the NCAA championship in the future.

This year, total rounds of golf were 16,340, an increase of 800 rounds over the previous year – a significant achievement considering that golf play across the country decreased by more than 5 percent. Merchandise sales in the pro shop grew by 23 percent over fiscal year 2010.

Also during the year, the course expanded its electronic marketing activities and redesigned the course's website to fully present the breadth of services available.

The Harry S. and Patsy B. Williams Clubhouse, with its spectacular view of the river and the mountains, hosted 110 non-golf events including university retreats and conferences, corporate and civic events, weddings and private parties. The partnership with Bull & Bones at The River has been successful in creating a popular destination for the community as well as meeting the food and beverage needs of golfers.
As an institution focused on higher education, Virginia Tech has not forgotten the importance of family and the education of our young children, nor that students and faculty seek out employment at places which place a high value on a work-life balance.

In 2009, Rainbow Riders Childcare Center opened its second site at the Virginia Tech Corporate Research Center. The two centers, located within walking distance of each other now serve more than 400 children and their families and employ more than 75 early childhood professionals.

The expansion of the Rainbow Riders program involved a number of people coming together to create a new community of learners. Rainbow Riders has a strong and caring team of teachers and nationally accredited administrators. Ongoing professional development and formal mentoring programs enable the centers to implement an innovative philosophy of early childhood education at both sites. Staff members attend and present at local, state, and national conferences and are leaders in advancing best practices in the early childhood field.

Children are thriving in positive, nurturing environments through the implementation of a creative, emergent curriculum. With an emphasis on relationships, teachers listen and interact with children and focus on respect and encouragement. Families are welcomed as partners in their child’s education and are invited to be active participants in the programs.

As the center embarks on its third year, a community-focused project that will tie the two sites together through common interests and experiences will be launched. The centers will focus on the development of community within each classroom, each site, and within the organization. The intention will be to enhance relationships through collaborations that enable children and families to develop a deeper connection to Rainbow Riders and the community at-large.

In October 2010, the Reynolds Homestead, in Critz, Va., celebrated the completion of a period-appropriate tobacco barn.

The barn will help visitors better understand the history of the 717-acre homestead. The homestead, which drew 15,700 visitors in fiscal year 2011, was the site of a successful tobacco farm in the 19th century, and is where Richard Joshua Reynolds, founder of the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, was born and began the business.

Construction of the new barn began in May 2010. Materials came from an original barn as well as two other structures donated by Ben and Betty Davenport. The Helen and Charles Patterson Charitable Foundation provided construction funds. The tobacco barn was one of several important additions to the homestead grounds, all of which were funded by donations or grants.

Fall 2010 also marked the opening of a one-mile forest trail, designed to serve as an outdoor classroom in accordance with Virginia’s Link to Education About Forests (LEAF) program, which is a partnership between Virginia Cooperative Extension and Virginia Department of Forestry’s Conservation Education Program.

The trail was funded by a grant from the Wildlife Ecology Foundation, which also paid for enhancements to the African American Cemetery of the Rock Spring Plantation located on the homestead grounds.

Meanwhile, significant progress was made on the project to install brick gates at the entrance to the homestead property. This project, funded by the Richard S. Reynolds Foundation, will make the property easier to find and create a stronger first impression on visitors.

Another highlight came in March 2011, when the homestead hosted a Big Read event. It was the first time this National Endowment for the Arts funded program, which promotes reading, was held in Patrick County.
FINANCIAL HIGHLIGHTS

The foundation’s assets increased by $132,000, ending the year at a value of $1.16 billion. Private giving increased during FY 2011, and foundation net revenues totaled $242.2 million, while expenditures supporting various university projects and programs totaled $124.4 million.

All amounts are based on US GAAP reporting standards.

VIRGINIA TECH FOUNDATION ENDOWMENT HIGHLIGHTS

As of June 30, 2011, the market value of all endowments held by the Virginia Tech Foundation, Inc. totaled $600.6 million. Of that total, $556.2 million is invested in the Foundation’s pooled consolidated endowment fund, while $44.4 million is held separately in notes, deeds of trust, gift annuities, contributions receivable, real estate partnerships and other miscellaneous endowed assets.

The June 30 allocation of the Foundation’s pooled endowment fund consisted of 33 percent global equities, 11.8 percent fixed income, 24.8 percent marketable alternative assets (hedge funds), 20.4 percent non-marketable alternative assets (private equity), 8.7 percent real assets, and 1.5 percent cash and cash equivalents. The fund achieved a total return of 19.6 percent for the year ending June 30 and an annualized return of 5.0 percent over the trailing five-year period.

The overriding principle of the Foundation’s consolidated endowment program is that funds should be managed so that a gift today will fund a donor’s objective in perpetuity. For example, if a benefactor endows a scholarship, the money is managed to maintain the real value of the endowment and keep pace with inflation. Each gift entering the consolidated endowment fund purchases units analogous to shares in a mutual fund and a payout-per-unit (or dividend) is paid quarterly.

In an effort to maintain the endowment’s purchasing power, the payout rate for program support is adjusted annually to reflect the change in the Consumer Price Index over the preceding calendar year. A twelve-quarter average of endowment values is used to smooth out the unit values when determining if program spending falls within the approved range of 3.75 percent to 5.25 percent. Without this moving average, funding might dramatically rise in one year, then fall drastically the next, leaving the beneficiaries of the endowments vulnerable to the volatility of the capital markets.

Policy on endowment management is made by the Foundation’s Investment Committee, whose main focus is the asset allocation and spending policy of the fund. Endowment consultants are retained to assist the Investment Committee and VTF staff with asset allocation decisions, the selection and retention of managers, performance monitoring, and related endowment policy issues. To completely diversify its portfolio, management of the fund is allocated among over 70 related endowment policy issues. To completely diversify its portfolio, management of the fund is allocated among over 70 management firms, partnerships and direct equity investments offering a wide variety of asset classes and investment styles.
Though fiscal year 2011 was characterized by an uncertainty surrounding the nation's economy, you would never know it by the generosity of Virginia Tech’s donors. This year was exceptional. Our donors gave more than $92.2 million to the university this year, an increase of nearly 13 percent over last year’s total and a fundraising record for Virginia Tech.

Virginia Tech remains a model for other land-grant institutions in terms of our emphasis on volunteer engagement and personal contact with donors. Over the course of The Campaign for Virginia Tech: Invent the Future, we engaged almost 900 volunteers. During this fiscal year, we involved as many alumni, parents, faculty, staff, and friends as possible, ending the fiscal year with more than 42,000 donors, including more than 6,800 new donors.

Virginia Tech’s alumni outdid themselves, increasing their giving by nearly 47 percent over last year. Other successes included the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, which saw an increase of nearly 56 percent; the College of Engineering, which saw an increase of 115 percent; and the Virginia Tech Corps of Cadets, which saw an increase of nearly 66 percent. Also of note is our Annual Giving program, which raised nearly $3.5 million this year, their second highest total ever. And giving to the university’s endowment nearly doubled, due in part to the largest realized bequest ever at Virginia Tech, and contributing greatly to the endowment reaching the $600 million dollar milestone.

Though corporate giving saw a decline this year—understandably given the realities of the nation’s economy—there are some gifts worth particular mention. Schlumberger, the nation’s leading oilfield services provider, donated software to the College of Science valued at $1.22 million. The J. W. and Alice S. Marriott Foundation gave $400,000 to support the Marriott Professorship of Hospitality Finance and Revenue Management in the Pamplin College of Business. And, Alpha Services gave $359,000 supporting several university areas and creating the John William Fox Jr. Memorial Scholarship in the Pamplin College of Business.

As we come to the successful completion of The Campaign for Virginia Tech: Invent the Future, I feel a sense of awe about how you – our most loyal benefactors – have chosen to support this remarkable university. I am no longer surprised by the generosity of our donors and the way the entire community comes together to support this amazing institution. But I am humbled and grateful.

With sincerest thanks,

Elizabeth A. Flanagan

THE UT PROSIM SOCIETY

Lifetime membership in the Ut Prosim Society, Virginia Tech’s most distinguished recognition society, is available, on an individual or joint basis, to alumni and friends whose lifetime giving totals $100,000 or more. The society has four levels: Benefactor (beginning at $100,000), Senior Benefactors (beginning at $250,000), Distinguished Benefactor (beginning at $500,000), and President’s Circle ($1 million or more).

In 1987, its first year, 127 household memberships were recognized as charter members. Since then, the society has grown to nearly 1,200 households, whose philanthropy touches almost every part of the university.

The President’s Circle is the highest level of membership with the Ut Prosim Society and is reserved for a select group of individuals whose exceptional contributions to Virginia Tech total $1 million or more. The President’s Circle charter members (denoted in italics below) were the first Ut Prosim members to be recognized for reaching this level in 2002. This select group has grown from 33 household memberships in 2002 to 89 household memberships this year.

In 2002 Virginia Tech created the Caldwell Society, named for William Addison Caldwell, the first student to enroll in Virginia Tech. The Caldwell Society recognizes alumni and friends who have made, either as individuals or couples, lifetime contributions of $50,000 or more to the university. Caldwell Society members whose giving reaches the $100,000 or more level advance into the Ut Prosim Society.

In its first year, 58 household memberships were recognized as Caldwell Society charter members. The number of total members continues to grow each year, and during the 2010-2011 fiscal year the society expanded by 28 percent, reaching 753 household memberships, with 59 households advancing from the Caldwell Society to the Ut Prosim Society. The following is a list of Caldwell Society members as of June 30, 2011.

Virginia Tech’s Legacy Society, established to recognize alumni and friends who provide for the university through their estate plans and other deferred gifts, added 181 new members this year. They joined a respected fellowship of benefactors that has grown from fewer than 100 members in 1990 to more than 1,700 individuals as of June 30, 2011.

This year, the university received the largest single bequest in its history – more than $17 million from the estate of Robert E. Hord, Jr. Distributions from this and other estates received during the fiscal year totaled more than $24 million, also a new university record. For the same period, revocable and irrevocable deferred gift commitments totaled more than $111 million, yet another university record.
